

The Colonnade

Vol XIII Z122

Georgia State College for Women; Milledgeville, Ga., Saturday, January 14, 1939

Number 12

EMORY'S DR. SMART DISCUSSES THE CHURCH IN THE SOUTH

Meaders Talks On Radio Hour

The first radio program for the New Year coming from the Georgia State College for Women will feature Miss Margaret Meaders, the Alumnae Secretary as the speaker. Miss Meaders is a graduate of GSCW and came last fall to fill this position at her Alma Mater. For several years she was a member of the News Bureau at the University of Georgia where she also served as associate editor of Items, a magazine.

Miss Meaders has selected the title, "The Road Out," for this talk in which she will tell of the numerous vocations which are being followed by the Alumnae of GSCW which furnishes other training centers besides that of teachers.

The program will be directed by Nelle Womack Hines.

DR. WELLS SPEAKS IN COLBERT

Dr. Guy H. Wells spoke to the Madison County Teachers' Association at Colbert on January 13. His speech was concerned with the situation of Georgia teachers.

Plans for the third annual Institute of Human Relations have been completed, the Y office announced yesterday. The program will begin at 10:30, Thursday January 26 and continue through Sunday, January 29.

CHARLES HAMILTON, of Aberdeen, Mississippi, minister of six Episcopal churches, will address IHR January 26-29.

One of the most interesting speakers to be here for the Institute of Human Relations, is Charles Granville Hamilton. Mr. Hamilton's home is in Aberdeen, Miss. He preaches in six Episcopal parishes of Northeast Mississippi. Then too, he preaches regularly at two Presbyterian churches, a Disciples church, and a Community church. Nor does he disdain the "Holy Rollers." Last summer, he conducted two Baptist and Four Methodist revivals. And almost converted himself.

Mr. Hamilton traveled 36,013 miles in the year 1938. He has no car. He claims, with some justification, to be the most experienced hitch-hiker in Mississippi. In the past seven years, he has read the Old Testament 58 times and the New Testament 382 times. During these years he has published 1,154 articles and 9 books. Mr. Hamilton facetiously says that thousands of people will unfortunately go (Continued on Page Seven)

Plans For IHR Complete; Smart, Hamilton To Speak

Problems of the South Topic of Institute

PARNOVA PRESENTS BALLET, JAN. 17

Ballerina Appears in Program of Classic and Modern Ballet

Lisa Parnova, who is to appear on the Concert Series here on January 17, has a wide repertoire, ranging from the classic dances to the modernistic dance, without music. To each of these techniques she brings a distinctive and gracious personality, a fine sense of rhythm, and certainty in her dance creations.

Her childhood was spent traveling in many countries; she studied with Michel Fokine in New York for six years, and attributes her present technical facility to this creator of the Russian ballet. While still in her teens, she was engaged as a premiere ballerina of Cologne Opera, perfecting her roles in classic ballets and learning much also from the modern dance movement which was so strong an influence in Germany at that time. During these years she gave guest performances all over Germany and at special Arts Festivals. She returned to Amer-trained musician can distinguish exact pitch.

LISA PARNOVA, Student of the Ballet, who has appeared with Philadelphia and Barrere Orchestras, is presented here on the Concert Series.

Continued on Back Page

SOPHS MAKE PLANS FOR DANCE NEXT WEEK

Collegians To Play For Evening Dance

Plans for the sophomore class dance next Saturday include having the music of the Georgia Collegians, a Sophomore Special dance to be led out by the officers of the class, and tea dance to serve as a prelude to the evening dance.

The dance will be from eight until twelve o'clock; the tea dance will be from four to six. The Georgia Collegians will contribute music for the evening dance, and the victorola will be put to use for the tea dance, said Catherine Boynton, Chairman of the Music Committee.

Chairmen for the other committees include Jane Melton and Madeline Blackwelder, co-chairmen of the Decoration Committee; Ruby Donald, chairman of the Date List Committee; and Frances Wilkie and Catherine Combs, co-chairmen of the Invitation Committee. The committee on refreshments is headed by Hortense Fountain and Catherine Bowman. The sophomore dormitory officers are in charge of the tea dance.

G. C. A. MEETING

College Government Association will have a most important meeting on Monday January 23, during the assembly period. The entire student body is expected to be present.

Problems and discussions of importance to every member of CGA will be taken up.

Quibbling...

There is connected with College Government Association, a quaint little document called the Constitution which states that its "fundamental principle shall be honor as it applies to every aspect of college life."

The Constitution is complete and comprehensive; it includes all the rules for general organization, a section on Powers and Duties of the officers of CGA, articles taking up the organization of the various courts, Student Council, and so on and on.

There is a brief paragraph under article III in Section 2 entitled "Eligibility for holding office shall be as follows: a. No student shall represent her class or be an officer in the College Government Association unless:

1. She is a regularly matriculated student for a diploma or degree.
2. She has a scholastic average of C or more during the current year."

And those are the ONLY qualifications for officers in the CGA besides special qualifications about the classification of the major officers.

Sanford Dormitory had an election last week for president of the dormitory. A girl was nominated, voted on, and it was fairly obvious that she was carrying the election when the CGA officials conducting the elections announced that the nominee would have to be withdrawn as she was ineligible. The reason, as stated, was that anyone who had been the cause of disciplinary trouble was ineligible to hold office. "One of the unwritten laws," they said.

Basing our point on the Constitution, we insist that the girl was eligible to office, both by written and unwritten law, if any.

By written law, the girl was eligible because she is definitely a regularly matriculated student, and for the past quarter she had a scholastic average of 79%. By unwritten law, she was just as eligible, because unwritten law is based on precedent. It is fairly easy to call to mind a number of past and present CGA officers who have, at one time or another, been campus or appeared before Upper Court. Specifically, last year's senior class president had a criminal record that would make the eyes of Campus Enemy No. 1 gleam with envy. It will be recalled that she held her office throughout our senior year despite major offenses as a steady diet and minor offenses for desserts.

There definitely seems to be a principle involved when the officers of CGA, singly or collectively, try to dictate to the students whom they shall elect. Within the limits prescribed in the constitution, the students are free to elect whom they choose. If they elect a person who is not a good representative, there is always the impeachment process. In any case, the Constitution is not open for impromptu revision by two or three members of CGA, no matter how good their intentions.

The facts, briefly, are these: 1. Two CGA officers holding dormitory elections at Sanford announced, after the votes were cast, that the nominee was ineligible for election because she had been campus during the last quarter and was, therefore, a disciplinary problem. 2. Nominee was not campus at the time the election was held, but was an ordinary member of CGA having the right to be elected to office as per the Constitution. 3. The nominee was entirely eligible according to the Constitution being a regularly matriculated student and having a high C average.

The only conclusion to be drawn is that the election was anti-constitutional and therefore null and void. The candidate who was elected, after the revision in the list of nominees had been made by the two officials is not legitimately entitled to the office. The former candidate is eligible, and was, therefore, elected when the votes were thrown out. As the votes were never counted, the only thing to do is to hold another election. It might be suggested that the election officials read carefully the Constitution of the College Government Association of the Georgia State College for Women before laying down the law so firmly again.

Commending...

It is practically impossible, in this modern world of social reforms to be unaffected or at least aware of the existence of such reforms. Everywhere around us forces are at work with which, whether we want to or not, we will have to cope in a not particularly dim or distant future, and which, whether we like it or not, will result in tremendous social, economic, and political changes during our lifetime, probably. We have heard all of this a great many times, from statesmen, newspapers, and in the classroom. In some it has aroused an interest amounting in extreme cases to actual study of the problems, in others, such statements and warnings have acted much like a serum, the more they are injected, the more immune the student becomes to any interest in the subject.

Since chapel is something that we must attend, we might go about it in a better spirit and be a bit more courteous. Remember this business of chapel may be just as much of an ordeal to the speaker as it is to you.

If it is true that there are problems existing in our nation, particularly the South, which are so vital to our own lives and futures, then is it not logical that we should make a thorough study of the problems, movements, and reforms even if only to keep posted on what is going on?

Such an opportunity is offered to every student on the campus, with no particular effort on his part, in the Institute of Human Relations to be held here on January 26-29. Following the Birmingham Conference on Human Welfare in the South, this Institute will continue the emphasis on the problems of the South, and men known for their study of the subject will present social, economic, political, and religious problems and some of their possible solutions.

The Institute should be interesting to every student because it will deal with situations with which we are all familiar, which form a part of our daily lives. Not only this, but the very personalities of the speakers will be an attraction. It is very difficult to come in contact with men who are overwhelmingly absorbed in a subject without contracting a little interest of our own.

The week-end of the Institute is the first home-going week-end of the quarter. There will be other home-going week-ends, while the Institute is the only opportunity of its kind to appear during the whole year. Surely, we may postpone our homegoing one week rather than miss an event so important to the GSCW campus and our individual pattern of thought.

The Colonnade

Published weekly during school year except during holidays and examination periods by the students of the Georgia State College for Women, Milledgeville, Georgia. Subscription price $1.00 per year. Entered as second-class matter October 30, 1928, at the post office, Milledgeville, Ga., under the act of March 3, 1879.

1938 Member 1939
Associated Collegiate Press

Distributor of College Digest

REPRESENTED FOR NATIONAL ADVERTISING BY National Advertising Service, Inc.
College Publishers Representative
420 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y.
Chicago • Boston • Los Angeles • San Francisco

Editor-in-Chief Betty Donaldson
Associate Editors—Catherine Cavanaugh, Margaret Weaver.

Business Manager Dot Howell
Assistant Business Manager Charlotte Howard
Editorial Assistants—Alice Fountain, America Smith, Edwina Cox, Marion Arthur, Marion Bennett, Marguerite Jernigan, Julia Weems, Sarah Alma Giles, Panke Knox.

Circulation Manager—America Smith.

Suggesting...

The song having been sung, the seats having been checked, the students slipped quietly out of chapel, while Dr. Wells was introducing a somewhat bewildered, if not critical speaker.

Being a student myself, I can easily understand the enticement of a nice juicy hot dog and Coca-Cola, not to mention a couple of letters from home—or elsewhere. And who wants to go to chapel anyway after having just sat through two classes in the periods preceding?

But then on the other hand we might consider the speaker for just a moment or two. Chapel is compulsory, but not because of anything the speaker has done. It is not generally his idea to speak in chapel; instead he is doing the school a favor and using his valuable time in doing so.

Since chapel is something that we must attend, we might go about it in a better spirit and be a bit more courteous. Remember this business of chapel may be just as much of an ordeal to the speaker as it is to you.

The Editor Comments...

This hints that members of the Upper Court are going to be deputized to patrol the campus on Sunday nights as aides to Mr. Bragg are disturbing in their implications. It seems unavoidable that it wouldn't be so very long before there would be one group of girls on the campus who would be as popular as the proverbial mouse-catching cat was with the mice. It just doesn't seem to be quite the sporting thing to do to interrupt the laboratory work of the girls who are interested in biological research.

All constructive activity in the Colonnade office has virtually ceased, due to the recent purchase of a game of Chinese Checkers. It was bought for the sole purpose of giving the editor something to do besides tearing her hair when a deadline was approaching and there was no copy.

It's either that all of us are getting dumber or that a few of us are getting smarter than the most of us. At any rate, the Dean's List is getting lower and lower. A couple of years ago there were one hundred and thirty three on the Dean's List for one quarter and one hundred and fifty-two the next, as compared with our Fall quarter seventy five. Maybe the rumor about raising scholarship that's been going around for a year or so has some truth to it.

Letters to The Editor

Dear Editor,

I would like to know if it would be possible for each dormitory room on the campus to be given a sign on which could be written these words, DO NOT DISTURB. Other colleges which I have visited have these signs and girls can thereby study in their rooms without being interrupted.

There is nothing I can say to my friends who visit me while I am trying to study, but if we had these signs on the doors, no one would come in, and I could accomplish some studying in the daytime without asking my friends to leave. I think many of the other girls feel as I do.

Sincerely, A FRESHMAN

Dear Editor:

For approximately three weeks, the hours of the GSCW library have been extended at night until 10:00 for the benefit of the students. Because of the large numbers of girls who have made use of this arrangement, it will be continued indefinitely.

The workers in the library wish to express their appreciation of the fine spirit with which the GSCW girls have used the library, and compliment them on being so prompt in learning the way to find materials easily and properly.

Sincerely,
A MEMBER OF THE LIBRARY STAFF

It Looks From HereNATIONAL EVENTS

One thing seems to be evident from the November elections, regardless of the effect on the present Congress and that is that President Roosevelt will continue his fight to liberalize the government and to win his objectives of what he considers a liberal democracy.

No other interpretation appears possible in view of the appointments he has made and which he has handed to Congress along with a message which reiterated the principal objectives which he has constantly redefined throughout his term of office. The appointment of Hopkins to the Post and Murphy to the Attorney Generalship was a direct slap at those who expected and wished the president to "coast" through the remaining portion of his term and to refrain from stepping on the toes of the conservatives. Taken together with the recommendation of Felix Frankfurter to the Supreme Court and the Jackson day speech in which he stated that the country will not follow a leader who possibly waits for events to precede him, there can be no doubt that Roosevelt has what is commonly known as intestinal fortitude.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in 1928 to its defeat at the hands of the reborn Republicans, but political splits have a way of healing in the face of opposition that at times seems almost miraculous and it would not be at all surprising to find Senator Josiah William Bailey of North Carolina, who almost had a fist fight with Hopkins one day, draping an arm affectionately around his shoulder and calling him "Harry, old boy".

It would have been comparatively easy for him to have appointed "middle of the roaders" to these positions and to have evaded the charge of both sides, and to have contented himself with allowing Congress to hamstring itself with factional disputes and thus emerge at the end of his term without risking a prestige which is admittedly high. He did not choose the easy course, and friend and enemy alike will have to grant to him a measure of courage rare in men to whom politics is a career.

Roosevelt seems to be determined that the control of the party in 1940 shall not pass to the reactionary branch of the party headed by the Garner-Clark bloc. His Jackson day speech indicated as much, and he served warning upon the survivors of his "purge" attempts that he has by no means abandoned the fight upon the principles for which they stand and which he does not because they happened to be victorious in elections which he considers to be as much the result of local issues as national policies.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in 1928 to its defeat at the hands of the reborn Republicans, but political splits have a way of healing in the face of opposition that at times seems almost miraculous and it would not be at all surprising to find Senator Josiah William Bailey of North Carolina, who almost had a fist fight with Hopkins one day, draping an arm affectionately around his shoulder and calling him "Harry, old boy".

It would have been comparatively easy for him to have appointed "middle of the roaders" to these positions and to have evaded the charge of both sides, and to have contented himself with allowing Congress to hamstring itself with factional disputes and thus emerge at the end of his term without risking a prestige which is admittedly high. He did not choose the easy course, and friend and enemy alike will have to grant to him a measure of courage rare in men to whom politics is a career.

Roosevelt seems to be determined that the control of the party in 1940 shall not pass to the reactionary branch of the party headed by the Garner-Clark bloc. His Jackson day speech indicated as much, and he served warning upon the survivors of his "purge" attempts that he has by no means abandoned the fight upon the principles for which they stand and which he does not because they happened to be victorious in elections which he considers to be as much the result of local issues as national policies.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in 1928 to its defeat at the hands of the reborn Republicans, but political splits have a way of healing in the face of opposition that at times seems almost miraculous and it would not be at all surprising to find Senator Josiah William Bailey of North Carolina, who almost had a fist fight with Hopkins one day, draping an arm affectionately around his shoulder and calling him "Harry, old boy".

It would have been comparatively easy for him to have appointed "middle of the roaders" to these positions and to have evaded the charge of both sides, and to have contented himself with allowing Congress to hamstring itself with factional disputes and thus emerge at the end of his term without risking a prestige which is admittedly high. He did not choose the easy course, and friend and enemy alike will have to grant to him a measure of courage rare in men to whom politics is a career.

Roosevelt seems to be determined that the control of the party in 1940 shall not pass to the reactionary branch of the party headed by the Garner-Clark bloc. His Jackson day speech indicated as much, and he served warning upon the survivors of his "purge" attempts that he has by no means abandoned the fight upon the principles for which they stand and which he does not because they happened to be victorious in elections which he considers to be as much the result of local issues as national policies.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in 1928 to its defeat at the hands of the reborn Republicans, but political splits have a way of healing in the face of opposition that at times seems almost miraculous and it would not be at all surprising to find Senator Josiah William Bailey of North Carolina, who almost had a fist fight with Hopkins one day, draping an arm affectionately around his shoulder and calling him "Harry, old boy".

It would have been comparatively easy for him to have appointed "middle of the roaders" to these positions and to have evaded the charge of both sides, and to have contented himself with allowing Congress to hamstring itself with factional disputes and thus emerge at the end of his term without risking a prestige which is admittedly high. He did not choose the easy course, and friend and enemy alike will have to grant to him a measure of courage rare in men to whom politics is a career.

Roosevelt seems to be determined that the control of the party in 1940 shall not pass to the reactionary branch of the party headed by the Garner-Clark bloc. His Jackson day speech indicated as much, and he served warning upon the survivors of his "purge" attempts that he has by no means abandoned the fight upon the principles for which they stand and which he does not because they happened to be victorious in elections which he considers to be as much the result of local issues as national policies.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in 1928 to its defeat at the hands of the reborn Republicans, but political splits have a way of healing in the face of opposition that at times seems almost miraculous and it would not be at all surprising to find Senator Josiah William Bailey of North Carolina, who almost had a fist fight with Hopkins one day, draping an arm affectionately around his shoulder and calling him "Harry, old boy".

It would have been comparatively easy for him to have appointed "middle of the roaders" to these positions and to have evaded the charge of both sides, and to have contented himself with allowing Congress to hamstring itself with factional disputes and thus emerge at the end of his term without risking a prestige which is admittedly high. He did not choose the easy course, and friend and enemy alike will have to grant to him a measure of courage rare in men to whom politics is a career.

Roosevelt seems to be determined that the control of the party in 1940 shall not pass to the reactionary branch of the party headed by the Garner-Clark bloc. His Jackson day speech indicated as much, and he served warning upon the survivors of his "purge" attempts that he has by no means abandoned the fight upon the principles for which they stand and which he does not because they happened to be victorious in elections which he considers to be as much the result of local issues as national policies.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in 1928 to its defeat at the hands of the reborn Republicans, but political splits have a way of healing in the face of opposition that at times seems almost miraculous and it would not be at all surprising to find Senator Josiah William Bailey of North Carolina, who almost had a fist fight with Hopkins one day, draping an arm affectionately around his shoulder and calling him "Harry, old boy".

It would have been comparatively easy for him to have appointed "middle of the roaders" to these positions and to have evaded the charge of both sides, and to have contented himself with allowing Congress to hamstring itself with factional disputes and thus emerge at the end of his term without risking a prestige which is admittedly high. He did not choose the easy course, and friend and enemy alike will have to grant to him a measure of courage rare in men to whom politics is a career.

Roosevelt seems to be determined that the control of the party in 1940 shall not pass to the reactionary branch of the party headed by the Garner-Clark bloc. His Jackson day speech indicated as much, and he served warning upon the survivors of his "purge" attempts that he has by no means abandoned the fight upon the principles for which they stand and which he does not because they happened to be victorious in elections which he considers to be as much the result of local issues as national policies.

In addition he left the door open for his renomination for a third term in case it seemed that no other liberal will fill the bill, but it would look from here that the elevation of Hopkins with that gentlemen's persuasive ways and undoubtedly liberalism might be the beginning of a build up of that fairhaired son of the New Deal for the 1940 nomination.

The nomination of Hopkins in 1940 over the bitter protest of the anti-New Dealers might lead to a split in the Democratic party which would lead as in

Reviews of Current Novels

MARION ARTHUR, Literary Editor

SPRINGS, MY SON, MY SON

Reviewed by Ruth Mosley

"And the king was much moved and went up to the chamber over the gate, and wept. And as he went, thus he said, 'O my son Absalom! Would God I had died for thee, O Absalom, my son, my son!'

This is the theme of Howard Spring's best seller, "My Son, My Son!" A beautifully poignant story of a father's love for his son, this book is one of the most dramatic novels which has appeared.

William Essex was the youngest son of a poor washwoman. At the age of twelve he left his home to stay with a preacher, Reverend Oliver, who gave him work to earn his board. From Reverend Oliver, William acquired much knowledge and taste for good reading. After the preacher's death, William went into the world to seek his fortune.

His subsequent marriage to Nellie Moscrop was more of a business proposition to Bill Essex than a matter of the heart. He felt that he had the ability to write great books, and Nellie's steady income made it possible for him to devote his time to writing. Before many years, Bill had made a comparatively large fortune.

A son was born to Nellie and Bill determined that never in his life would Oliver lack the things he needed and wanted. He loved Oliver more than anything in the world, and in his son he relived his own life.

After Nellie's death, Bill fell in love with a beautiful young lady, Livia Vaynol. The conflict between father and son, which characterized the book, first began to be apparent when Oliver was also strongly attracted to Livia, and she to him. When Livia promised to marry Bill, the bond between Bill and Oliver was broken, and Oliver left home, refusing to communicate with his father in any way. Finally Livia refused to marry Bill, and eloped with Oliver.

The World War followed soon after the separation of William and Oliver, and Oliver was called to the battlefield. On one of his leaves of absence, Oliver became interested in Maeve O'Riordan, a girl who had been in love with Bill all her life, but whom Bill did not love. Oliver swept Maeve off her feet, and was the cause of her committing suicide. Bill knew that Oliver had been the cause of Maeve's taking her life, and this knowledge only made the bitter feeling between the two stronger.

After the war was over, Oliver became involved in serious trouble. He had learned to kill on the battlefield, and he didn't realize that killing in society was a crime. He robbed and killed a man, but he managed to escape. His father knew where he had gone, and he felt that if only he could talk with Oliver as they had done years ago, he would feel at peace.

When Oliver saw his father, the barriers were broken down, and although Oliver was found and sentenced to be hanged, Bill felt more kindly toward the world than he had felt since the first estrangement.

"My Son, My Son" is a story of emotional power and brilliant characterizations. Mr. Spring uses a simple style to tell this eventful and readable story.

LAND OF THE FREE

ARCHIBALD MACLEISH

"The Land of the Free" is a book that will appeal to persons who find in "You Have Seen Their Faces" by Erskine Caldwell and Margaret Bourke White dire pro-

Horsbrugh and Steele Entertain String Club

1

Miss Adams Recovering From Recent Illness

2

The String Ensemble will be hostesses at a party Sunday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock at the home of Miss Steele and Miss Horsbrugh. This informal affair will be for both active and non-active members. Questionnaire, radio games, and other forms of entertainment will be enjoyed.

The Ensemble has, as its most recent project, the learning of folk tunes.

Premature Spring Brings Out New Outfits

Sunday had all the evidences of spring having sprung; consequently, there were all manner of good-looking new outfits floating about the campus.

I don't know who this person was, but she really looked wonderful coming out of Terrell, wearing a dress of that new suede rose shade with a full pleated skirt . . .

I didn't get to glimpse at the rest of the dress as it was obscured by the best looking little short, black fur jacket with elbow sleeves . . . Miss What-ever-her-name-is wore dunbonnet shoes and accessories . . .

Buster White, a new-comer to the campus, on her way to church in a very smart looking grey wool. The skirt was made on the bias and flared slightly; the waist was made simply with short sleeves and a little buster brown collar. From the waist and sleeves steel braid radiated at random all over the dress. Eva Adams in a lovely, royal blue velvet dress, the skirt of which was straight except in the center front where it was tucked, giving a soft, full effect. The waist had short sleeves and a V neck, and the tucks were carried out on the shoulders. She wore several strands of pearls, and black accessories . . . Lucy Wightman ambling about the campus Sunday afternoon in the best looking beige wool, one pieced dress, made simply with a single pleat down the front of the skirt . . .

There were four round, tailored pockets, two on the waist, two on the material.

THIS COLLEGIALE WORLD

Harvardman Gordon M. Riggs claims he isn't the Hercules of college—but he proved he at least had a Herculean sense of humor when he made that statement. In case you haven't heard about Gordon M., you'll lift your eyebrows a notch two when you learn that he can twist an iron rod into the shape of a pretzel barehanded. Listen to him:

"Of course I do knot up an iron bar now and then and I have lifted four men weighing more than 600 pounds, but I don't think I'm much stronger than the average college student. I put my fist through that wall over there, but the plaster must have been kind of soft."

Yes, just like that, he wins our plaster pusher gonfalon!

Believe it or not, the day when "ponies" for foreign language classes will be formally okayed by the faculty is fast approaching. You who slave over those difficult translations will be interested in knowing that Instructor Nathan Susskind of College of the City of New York has given recognition with this definition: "A 'college widow' is the unfortunate young woman who, having been the pet of several college generations without making a single permanent capture, at last finds herself deserted of admirers, and with faded charms, falls out of sight and memory."

We'll all be riding ponies to straight A's pretty soon!

University of Chicago word technicians have been working for a long time now on a new American-English dictionary, and they've come across a couple of facts that may be of interest to you. For instance:

They've found that use of the word "co-ed" was first made in

Collegiate Review

Davey O'Brien, Texas Christian University all-American grid player, received more than 2,000 letters and cards from fans during 1938 season.

Princeton University has received a special grant to finance a study of the effects of the Orson Welles broadcast of the invasion from Mars.

Saturday afternoon is bath-time at the University of Alabama: students there use more gallons of water from 2 to 6 p.m. Saturday than any other time of the week.

Beginning next fall, the University of Michigan will inaugurate an experimental tutorial system modeled on the Oxford plan.

3

4

5

6

7

8

9

10

11

12

13

14

15

16

17

18

19

20

21

22

23

24

25

26

27

28

29

30

31

32

33

34

35

36

37

38

39

40

41

42

43

44

45

46

47

48

49

50

51

52

53

54

55

56

57

58

59

60

61

62

63

64

65

66

67

68

69

70

71

72

73

74

75

76

77

78

79

80

81

82

83

84

85

86

87

88

89

90

91

92

93

94

95

96

97

98

99

100

101

102

103

104

105

106

107

108

109

110

111

112

113

114

115

116

117

118

119

120

121

122

123

124

125

126

127

128

129

130

131

132

133

134

135

136

137

138

139

140

141

142

143

144

145

146

147

148

149

150

Literary Guild Holds First Meeting of Year

The first meeting of the Literary Guild for this year was held last night in Beeson Recreation Hall at 7:15.

Dr. Armanda Johnson gave a talk on the history of Georgia, using as the basis of her talk the book she wrote last summer, "Georgia as Colony and State—1733-1837." She spoke mainly on the literature of Georgia.

Cordell Heads Frosh Council

Installation of the newly elected officers of Freshman Council will take place Sunday night at Vespers in the auditorium. The officers to be installed in the YW are Elizabeth Cordell, president; Augusta Slapley vice-president; Mary Jeanne Everett, secretary; and Scotta Hill, treasurer.

What To Do, and When

If girls realized the trifles that make a man happy, they would find winning him very much easier than the task appears to be.

A man does not like the use of lipstick in public—most of you have on too much anyway.

He resents her use of a comb at the table. Added to the fact that it is very bad socially, these up-swept coiffures require too long to arrange.

Definitely, he does not admire too much rouge. Even stupid as they are, men know the difference between Mother Nature's red roses and Max Factor, shade number 3.

Only persons who frequent cheap burlesques chew gum vociferously in public. It does lead such a study.

Alumnae Corner

EMILY LAMAR SHEALY, '38, became Mrs. Guy H. Wells, Jr., during the holidays. Emily is continuing her work as secretary to the field manager of the Georgia Press Association at Atlanta. Mr. Wells, the son of GSCW's president, graduated from Georgia Tech, where he was President of Kappa Alpha Fraternity, Business Manager of the "Yellow Jacket," and a member of O. D. K., highest national academic society. He is now connected with the advertising staff of the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION.

MARY S. DAVIS, '38, is now Mrs. W. B. Johnson, of 595 Linden Ave., Atlanta, Ga. Before her marriage Mary was connected with the Home Mission Board in Atlanta. Her husband is with the post roads division of the state highway.

MARGARET CAMP, '28, is Mrs. Russell Thomas, whose husband is chief surgeon at the United States Marine Hospital in Chelsea, Mass. They have four lovely children.

CORNELIA CHAPPELL is doing adult education work in home economics at the Imperial Mills Village school near Eatonton.

SALLIE CLODFELTER, '38, is teaching social news plus other kinds, for the AUGUSTA CHRONICLE, and having an interesting career according to several of the Augusta students on the Campus now.

On Christmas Day CLIFFORD BOND, '37, was married to J. W.

YW COMMITTEE OFFERS (Continued from Page Three)

A Columbia University cloakroom attendant who had been employed by the university for 28 years left that institution $500 in her will.

Last year several letters appeared in the Colonnade in which students asked that a course in the study of marriage problems be placed in the curriculum. Since no administrative interest was shown in the question, the YWCA is attempting to answer this need, which the extremely large group of upperclassmen present at the first meeting proved to be a real need, by introducing into their work a discussion group, to be held much in the form of a course taught in the curriculum, but having no actual connection with the curriculum.

Since January 1, 1938 construction on college and university union buildings has been begun or completed at a cost of more than $6,000,000.

In the U. S. there are 675 endowed colleges and universities which have a total of more than $1,500,000,000 in endowment.

The general plan of the study is that all problems of marriage-psychological, economic, or physical, shall be taken up in a serious, impersonal way, with as broad a viewpoint as it is possible to maintain. Mr. Massey will lecture and attempt to lead the girls to open discussions when it seems advisable, probably calling upon experts in medical or psychological fields when necessary. His wide experience in the Y work, the ministry, and as a student of ministry and the family, makes Mr. Massey particularly suited to lead such a study.

FRESHMEN ARE CONVENTIONAL (Continued from Page Three)

About three-fourths of the freshmen are the oldest children in the families. Sixty-three per cent of the brothers and sisters of the other one-fourth went to college. Only one third of the sisters had obtained degrees or diplomas.

Although a large percentage of the freshmen do live in rural districts, at present, two-thirds of them said emphatically that they were going to live in towns or cities when they finished college. At that rate farmers will be as rare as the dodo bird in a few years.

Only 12% of the fathers of freshmen own their own business. The majority, 56%, are "white collar workers," and 32% are farmers.

The freshmen are predominantly Baptist. The next largest number are Methodist, with the other denominations being largely negligible.

The editor ended the weekly plea for something by begging for chicken à la king rather than beef à la joker.

Fan dancer: Doctor, I want you to vaccinate me where the scar won't show.

Doctor: O. K. Stick out your tongue.

A beggar approached her asking for a dollar.

Victim: Seems to me you have pretty big ideas in asking for a dollar.

Beggar: Well, Miss, I'm putting all my begs in one askit:

CHRISTINE GOODSON, '34, well-known on the Campus for her work in the YWCA, holding the office of the First Vice-President while here, is now Mrs. J. E. Brim of Dawson. Before her marriage Christine continued her studies at the New York School of Social Work, after which she was medical social worker at the Macom hospital. Until recently she served as director of the Terrell County department of public welfare in Dawson. Mr. Brim, who is vice-president and manager of the Dawson Cotton Oil Co., is also one of Terrell County's most extensive farmers. He is president of the Dawson Kiwanis Club, and is active in all phases of civic activities in Dawson.

Are the Upper Court members going to be deputized to serve with Tom Bragg as "special Policemen?" Is the conduct on this campus so governed that a few students, whose affections are such that they can't be stifled, can jeopardize the dating privileges of all the students? By privileges, I mean the enjoyment, the feeling of being out from under Mama's apron-strings on a date, and above all, the feeling that this campus is not supposed to be a prison.

Is it true that Freshman and Sophomores will not be allowed to have dates except on alternate Sunday nights? If it is, why? Is G. S. C. W. going forward in its government or are we returning to the era of bustles and eighteen-inch waists?

Will you please define "college government" and "student government"? These terms are used so indiscriminately on this campus that it is confusing, and I would like to know which we have. According to the idea I have now, the difference is great and very important.

Sincerely yours,

A member of College Government who thought it meant democratic governing by all the students.

Collegiate Review Years Ago

A Columbia University cloakroom attendant who had been employed by the university for 28 years left that institution $500 in her will.

Bill Kelley, a blind athlete, is trying for a position on the University of Pittsburgh track team in the high-jumping division. His average leap is five feet, five inches.

Since January 1, 1938 construction on college and university union buildings has been begun or completed at a cost of more than $6,000,000.

In the U. S. there are 675 endowed colleges and universities which have a total of more than $1,500,000,000 in endowment.

The 160 freshmen and sophomores at Goucher College follow no less than 114 different personal curricula.

FRESHMEN ARE CONVENTIONAL (Continued from Page Three)

About three-fourths of the freshmen are the oldest children in the families. Sixty-three per cent of the brothers and sisters of the other one-fourth went to college. Only one third of the sisters had obtained degrees or diplomas.

Although a large percentage of the freshmen do live in rural districts, at present, two-thirds of them said emphatically that they were going to live in towns or cities when they finished college. At that rate farmers will be as rare as the dodo bird in a few years.

Only 12% of the fathers of freshmen own their own business. The majority, 56%, are "white collar workers," and 32% are farmers.

The freshmen are predominantly Baptist. The next largest number are Methodist, with the other denominations being largely negligible.

The editor ended the weekly plea for something by begging for chicken à la king rather than beef à la joker.

Fan dancer: Doctor, I want you to vaccinate me where the scar won't show.

Doctor: O. K. Stick out your tongue.

A beggar approached her asking for a dollar.

Victim: Seems to me you have pretty big ideas in asking for a dollar.

Beggar: Well, Miss, I'm putting all my begs in one askit:

Quotable Quotes

"The university must make deliberate, conscious attempts to tie itself into the pattern of American community life in some meaningful way if it is to justify its place in the community as an instrument for the protection and advancement of democracy." New York University's Dean Ned H. Dearborn urges higher education to pay more attention to adult education.

"Only relatively late in human history have people been able to think before they speak and speak before they act. Most of us still do it rather infrequently and with rather indifferent success." Miami University's Dr. Read Bain believes we are suffering from "acute but highly contagious blabitis."

"In the process of Americanizing our education we have really, without knowing it, drifted away from our older American tradition. Nationalism, even if it is Americanism, is not liberalism. It very easily becomes the opposite." Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton University deplores the decline of the study of the humanities.

G. S. C. W. Six

Six long years ago the student body was gushing with gratitude at the privileges offered them—permission to form a Student Government Association. The girls had been judged old and big enough to take care of themselves—no longer would the faculty have to nurse the students. But in the years gone by something has happened to College Government. (Maybe its saving its strength.) And we wonder, if, some day, history will repeat itself and someday we'll get some privileges too.

Roosevelt's Birthday was celebrated by a pageant and ball. Dr. Johnson prophesied the future and presented, "That Man Roosevelt!" Lot of us agree to that phrasing now.

Dr. Buckner should be cheered to learn that we, as a body, are healthier than the G. S. C. W. girls of the past. Why, in those days, a girl stopped eating on a pound of marshmallow cakes after consumer a mere eleven. And, as you remember, last fall one of our contemporaries ate twenty-one doughnuts.

Freshman Council is really a Council now, because it has elected as officers: President, Elizabeth Cordell, Hartwell, Ga.; Vice-President, Elizabeth Slapley, Bainbridge, Ga.; secretary, Mary Jeanne Everett, Dublin, Ga.; treasurer, Scotta Hill, Talbotton, Ga.; At Vespers Sunday evening Freshman Council will be installed. The service will be for the dedication of Council and Y members.

Sophomore Commission has full intentions of getting a lot out of the Institute, because last week, and for the next two weeks, it will study carefully the report to the President on the economic conditions of the South.

At Cabinet meeting on Monday night, Marguerite Jernigan gave an interesting statement by Dorothy Thompson: "All the political tendencies momentarily raging in our times are anti-liberal." She followed this with the author's definition of liberalism. "Liberalism is pre-eminently a type of mind, a kind of spirit and a sort of behavior, the basis of which is an enormous respect for personality. It is, therefore, above everything else human and humane. Its premise is that there is good in every nature; that a good society is the one in which that goodness can be given the greatest possibility.

Colleges are shown to differ widely in the capacity of their students. In one extreme case all of the students in the sophomore class of one college ranked lower in an intelligence test than the dullest student in the sophomore class of a superior institution.

And how are these students being affected? They have personal contact with other students as the most frequent way, and in addition name class discussions, invitations to meetings, printed material, and professors who, as a University of Minnesota freshman put it, "are so progressive" I believe they tend toward communism."

This poll, like all others conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys, attempts merely to sound out student thought. Perhaps students are unaware of propaganda. Perhaps their individual definitions of the "isms" differ. But their answers represent what all American college youths respond to the question, and should not be construed to mean that one-tenth of the students have actually been influenced. The Survey points out only that one-tenth has felt attempts of propaganda.

This Week With the "Y"

Knowing that each person who is a member of the Y is interested in its activities, the Cabinet decided that a meeting of ALL Members will be held in Ennis recreation hall, Wednesday night, January 18, at seven o'clock. At this meeting plans for the quarter will be presented and discussed.

This meeting has another purpose, and that is to give each member a chance to make suggestions for the Y's activities. There are some questions of organization still in the minds of a few. Those will be cleared up too. In other words come to Ennis Recreation Hall and bring your questions and suggestions.

While he is here, Mr. Hamilton will speak on Saturday, at 10:30, 4:00, and 8:00, on The Effect of the International Scene on the South.

Dr. W. A. Smart, of Emory University will conclude the Institute of Human Relations Sunday, January 29, at the regular vespers hour. Dr. Smart has served as professor of Biblical theology at Emory since 1914, when he moved to Georgia, after being pastor at several Virginia churches. He has studied at Vanderbilt, Union Theological Seminary, University of Chicago, and he received the degree of D. D. S. at Southern Methodist University. Dr. Smart will discuss, Religion, The Hope of the South.

Sophomore Commission has full intentions of getting a lot out of the Institute, because last week, and for the next two weeks, it will study carefully the report to the President on the economic conditions of the South.

At Cabinet meeting on Monday night, Marguerite Jernigan gave an interesting statement by Dorothy Thompson: "All the political tendencies momentarily raging in our times are anti-liberal." She followed this with the author's definition of liberalism. "Liberalism is pre-eminently a type of mind, a kind of spirit and a sort of behavior, the basis of which is an enormous respect for personality. It is, therefore, above everything else human and humane. Its premise is that there is good in every nature; that a good society is the one in which that goodness can be given the greatest possibility.

Only about half of the youth of outstanding ability are getting into college, the pamphlet declares, while at least one-fourth of the college students are below the average out-of-school youth in ability.

Colleges are shown to differ widely in the capacity of their students. In one extreme case all of the students in the sophomore class of one college ranked lower in an intelligence test than the dullest student in the sophomore class of a superior institution.

And how are these students being affected? They have personal contact with other students as the most frequent way, and in addition name class discussions, invitations to meetings, printed material, and professors who, as a University of Minnesota freshman put it, "are so progressive" I believe they tend toward communism."

This poll, like all others conducted by the Student Opinion Surveys, attempts merely to sound out student thought. Perhaps students are unaware of propaganda. Perhaps their individual definitions of the "isms" differ. But their answers represent what all American college youths respond to the question, and should not be construed to mean that one-tenth of the students have actually been influenced. The Survey points out only that one-tenth has felt attempts of propaganda.

The Isms Do Not Touch Students in Southern States

By JOE BELDEN, Editor

Student Opinion Surveys of America

AUSTIN, Texas, Jan.—Communist, socialist, and fascist propaganda among college students is being felt mainly in the East Central and Middle Atlantic states. This is shown by a nation-wide poll taken by the Student Opinion Surveys of America just as the Dies committee ended its investigation of un-American activities and is making preparations for another.

Chesterfield's "right combination" story is enlivened and humanized by the use of photographs of well-known personalities such as Hal Sims, the bridge expert, Veloz and Yolanda, society dancers, The Flying Wallendas of circus fame, Miss Marilyn Monroe, winner of the recent Miss America contest, the famous Rockettes of Radio City Music Hall, George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, and John Payne of the picture "Wings of the Navy" and others of national note.

I had to leave her. And sent her flowers. She had hay-fever. And wept for hours.

Dot: Are you sure your folks know I'm coming home to dinner with you?

Judy: They ought to. They argued with me a whole hour over it.

Patronize Our Advertisers

This ad is worth 15¢ with a 50¢ Job or more at HARPER'S SHOE SHOP 122 South Wayne Phone 215

DOVE DOWN SPECIAL!

Two Pair 79¢ Hose for $1.39
Two Pair $1.15 Hose for $2.00

THREE DAYS ONLY AT G. & L. DRESS SHOP AND BEAUTY PARLOR

For Clothes You Value Call

Snow's

"We Serve The Best You Be Our Guests"
COLLEGE DEPT. STORE
"Your Satisfaction Our Aim"
Novelty Spring Sweaters and Skirts
ENNIS COFFEE SHOP

VALENTINES AT Wootten's Book Store

CAMPUS

A MARTIN THEATRE
Phone 44 Frank D. Adams, Mgr.
Mon., Tues., Jan. 16-17

"OUT WEST WITH THE HARDY'S"
With Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone

Wednesday, Jan. 18
Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce

In "THERE'S THAT WOMAN AGAIN"

73 Students on Dean's List

STORY ON PAGE THREE

LISA PARNOWA

(Continued from front page)

Modern life filled her with new ideas for dances which she worked out on her concert programs throughout the country. In each appearance, Lisa Parnova proved anew to her audiences her versatility, her dramatic power and rare grace. She danced one of her favorite roles, that of the Ballerina in "Petrovchka" at the Dance Center in New York. She has appeared also as a soloist with the Philadelphia Orchestra and with the Barrere Little Symphony, which gave a concert here last year. For two years she toured the country as head of a ballet company with Edwin Strawbridge as her partner. This year she will be assisted by Alexis Dolinoff, who as a boy danced with Palova's company and has since been with major ballet companies both here in America and abroad.

Miss Parnova is more than an excellent dancer; endowed with beauty and a charming manner, she has a style which is essentially her own, of which John Martin, the critic of the New York Times said recently, "Miss Parnova is essentially a romanticist. To find a dancer who has a sense of the great range of the dance is refreshing enough, but to find one who has realized this in practice is a unique experience. Miss Parnova set herself a gargantuan task in her program, and came out with victory."

The only time some girls draw the line is when they are using an eyebrow pencil.

REC. ACTIVITIES

(Continued from Page Five)

cabin at the park may be used by college students for recreation.

BASKETBALL CAPTAINS NAMED

New freshman captains for basketball include Electra Smith, Augusta Slapley, Emogene Grant, and Connie Noulis. Edna Fine is a new sophomore captain.

Basketball season is now open, and greater student participation is needed. Come on out; enjoy yourself. It takes a lot of playing and practice to perfect your technique so begin now. Let the sports manager have your full co-operation by reporting to practice on the right afternoons and regularly.

Freshmen seem more interested than upperclassmen in the sport. Marjorie Edwards is assistant manager for Tuesday and Thursday afternoons and Polly Kirkman is assistant for Mondays and Wednesdays.

GET IN THE SWIM

Swimming period is scheduled for each afternoon from five to six. Get in the swim; the water's fine. Practice up on your swimming and diving form by participating in this sport each day. A glance at fashions should convince you that it won't be long now till spring and the good old summer time. Join the mermaids and head for the Physical Education building for a pleasant dip. Swimmin's fun! Need we tell you?

PING PONG TOURNAMENT

Sign up now in your dormitory for the ping pong tournament. Be sure to get this done right away. Henrietta Carson is the manager of individual sports.

GAME ROOM TO BE USED

Have you seen the new game room in the new building? It will be open every afternoon from five to six, and instruction will be given in various games. There is space and equipment for shuffleboard, rubber blowing, paddle tennis, ring tennis, table tennis, and darts. It's ready for you. Especially should this recreational feature interest very busy or very lazy people. It doesn't take much time, much effort, or much skill to enter into this fun. You will be surprised how enjoyable individual sports are.

KEEP POSTED!

Be sure to remember to notice and read the bulletin posted on the recreation boards in each dormitory. These bulletin boards are used for announcing important recreational activities.

*Turn to CHESTERFIELDS
the Happy Combination
for More Smoking Pleasure*

More smokers every day are turning to Chesterfield's happy combination of mild ripe American and aromatic Turkish tobaccos—the world's best cigarette tobaccos.

When you try them you will know why Chesterfields give millions of men and women more smoking pleasure . . . why THEY SATISFY

*...the blend that can't be copied
...the RIGHT COMBINATION of the world's best cigarette tobaccos*